World council to get food to needy nations

CEREMONIES WERE HELD FRIDAY in cold and blustery weather for the opening of the final segment of the East-West Tollway extension which terminates at Rock Falls. The 69-mile extension was opened to traffic at midnight Friday, two years later than was originally scheduled. The tollway now extends 93 miles west of Eisenhower Expressway and tolls for passenger cars traveling the entire length are $1.90. The toll from Dixon to the Eisenhower Expressway is $1.70. The last link of the extension opened was between Rochelle and Rock Falls, a distance of 31 miles. Tollway authorities and interested persons from Dixon, Sterling and Rock Falls attended the ceremonies, many of them had worked for many years to have the tollway extended to the western area of the state. ROME (AP) — The World Food Conference agreed today to set up an umbrella body to funnel food and money to needy nations, U.S. sources said. It was considered the major breakthrough of the conference.

"We have an agreement," one of the informants said, emerging from the caucus where the accord was hammered out in negotiations with representatives from all blocs. "There was a lot of compromise, but at the end this can be a very effective operation."

The informants said the body will be called the World Food Council, will be set up by the United Nations General Assembly, and will report to it through the U.N.'s Economic and Social Council.

They said the Food Council will probably consist of about 25 members, have its headquarters in Rome, and work alongside the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization.

The sources said it will program policy on world food availability, emergency food aid and investments for developing agriculture in poor nations, and that it will include an agricultural development fund, proposed by the oil-producing countries, as a branch.

Resolutions passed Friday night also offered some hope that future food shortages may be avoided for the world's half billion hungry people.

The 123 nations at the United Nations-sponsored conference approved a measure—strongly supported by the United States—calling on wealthy countries to supply 10 million tons of grain a year to the hungry.

By calling for financial assistance as well as actual food aid, the conference implicitly appealed to oil producing nations to contribute part of their new-found wealth to the project.

The conference also approved a proposal for building grain reserves as a buffer against natural disaster. The plan called for establishing a system of nationally held but internationally coordinated grain banks. The amount of grain to be stored was not unspecified. The measure was proposed by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in an opening-day address.

A third measure adopted Friday called for a system to provide an early warning of conditions that might lead to starvation.

The proposals were adopted almost unanimously. China and Albania were the only countries expressing reservations, claiming the proposed system might violate the principle of national sovereignty.

Further meetings of interested parties will be necessary if the resolutions are to be implemented.

A U.S. delegate reiterated Kissinger's suggestions that a coordinating group be formed and that representatives of donor and donee nations meet to follow up any resolutions passed at the conference.

The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization says that at least half a billion persons are facing starvation in the world, and a Bangladesh official said 200,000 Bengalis died in the last two months of its current famine.

The United States announced Friday it had signed an agreement with Bangladesh assuring 250,000 tons of grain through next June under a 40-year, easy credit program.

Chrysler may shutdown all plants in December

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

Government statistics showing reduced industrial output and reports of a December shutdown of most of Chrysler Corp.'s car assembly plants indicate a bleak Christmas season for factory workers.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Friday that industrial production dropped last month for the fourth time in five months. The drop of six-tenths of 1 per cent was the sharpest drop since February.

And the board's analysis of the latest figures showed that last month's drop is not likely to be the end of deterioration in production.

In Detroit auto industry sources said Chrysler will close five of its six car assembly plants for the month of December, idling almost 30,000 assemblers. These shutdowns could force layoffs throughout the Chrysler system, throwing another 50,000 or more workers off the job, sources said.

Chrysler would neither confirm nor deny the reports.

A Chrysler spokesman said mounting inventories of unsold new cars had reached a "critical level" but that no decision had been made on the December shutdown.

The Federal Reserve Board forecast another decline in industrial output in November because of production cutbacks already announced by the auto industry.

Meanwhile, attempts to win United Mine Workers approval of a proposed new contract bogged down as the union's regional leaders threatened to force a reopening of negotiations.

A UMW official said he expected the nationwide coal strike to last at least three weeks, which would begin to trigger thousands of layoffs and force production cutbacks in the steel industry, with a rippling effect on other industries.

The Federal Reserve Board noted that the October production figures would have been even worse without a 9 per cent jump in auto assemblies and a 6 per cent spurt in iron and steel production in anticipation of the coal strike.

The October slump left the Fed's index 1.7 per cent below a year ago, the most severe slump since the recession of 1969 and 1970.

The Ford administration earlier served notice that the expected drop in the latest monthly statistic had prompted President Ford to conclude that a recession is seizing the economy.

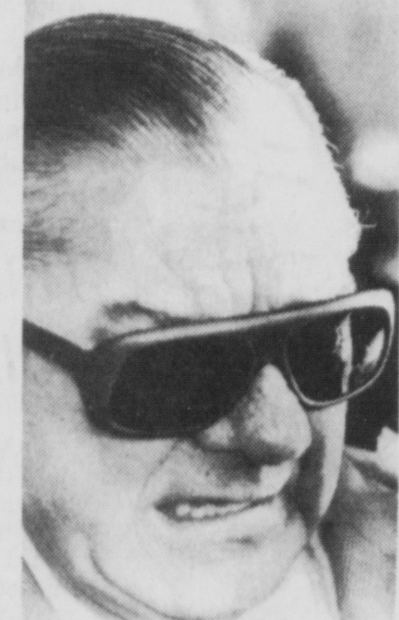

There were these other developments in the economy:

—Corporate profits edged upward during the three-month period that ended Sept. 30, the Commerce Department said. Corporate profits increased 12 per cent over the previous quarter, but the department said the bulk of the increase was accounted for by the higher value of business inventories as inflation drove prices up even while goods sat in warehouses.

—The nation's inflation rate was 12.5 per cent in the third quarter, instead of the 12.1 per cent reported earlier, and the nation's economy declined at a rate of 2.1 per cent, instead of the 2.9 reported earlier, the department said.

—Two of the country's largest sugar refiners, Amstar Corp., and Suckert Corp., announced price increases of about five cents per pound.

—Government sources said the United States will impose tough quotas on the importation of Canadian beef and livestock in a move designed to get the removal of Canadian quotas on imports of U.S. beef.

Tractor mishap kills Bresson

Forty-four-year-old Raymond Bresson, Rt. 1, West Brooklyn, was killed when he was pinned beneath a tractor Friday.

Bresson was working on the Evelyn Maier farm, one mile south of U.S. 30 on the West Brooklyn Spur, when the accident occurred.

According to reports Bresson was backing a John Deere diesel tractor to two gravity-flow wagons. He then apparently stepped on the right brake too hard, causing the tractor to tip over on top of himself. Reports also indicated the ground was soft and could have added to the cause of the accident.

Larry Northcott, who was working with Bresson, attempted to help Bresson but after getting no response he flagged down a passing motorist, Larry Baker, to send for help. The West Brooklyn Fire Department was summoned to get Bresson out from under the tractor but a wrecker from Amboy had to be called to pull the tractor off the body. Bresson was pinned under the tractor for nearly two hours.

Lee County Sheriff's Deputies and Lee County Coroner Robert Preston were also called to investigate the accident. An inquest was held earlier today.

Surviving Bresson are his widow, Donna; two daughters, Michelle and Lisa, both at home; one brother, Robert, Compton. Bresson owned and operated Bresson's Airport on U.S. 30 and was a farm equipment dealer for Mayrath Industries and the Behlem Bins.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 10:30 a.m. in St. Mary's Catholic Church, West Brooklyn, with the Rev. Lawrence London officiating.

Visitation will be held Sunday from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Torman Funeral Home, Paw Paw, where the prayer service will be held at 8 p.m.

Little chance of war: Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says reports of a serious military buildup in the Middle East are exaggerated and there is little likelihood of a new Arab-Israeli war.

In a Friday news conference, Kissinger also said he expects the United States to increase its emergency food aid abroad by the end of the year in tonnage as well as value.

The secretary advised that no major announcements were expected from President Ford's trips to Japan, South Korea and the Soviet Union. He spoke in the same vein about his own separate visit to Communist China after Ford returns home. The administration party leaves Sunday.

Although the news conference was called to discuss the overseas travels, most of the 40 minutes were taken up with the Middle East, particularly the outlook for a new conflict.

Miners' consideration of new contract put off; council member killed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leaders of the United Mine Workers, stunned by the murder of a bargaining council member in a hotel robbery, today put off until next week further consideration of a proposed new contract with the coal industry.

The delay will extend the nationwide coal mine strike into a third week and force additional layoffs.

The union's 38-member bargaining council held a memorial service at UMW headquarters and then adjourned until after the funeral Monday for the slain official, Sam Littlefield, 54, of Bessemer, Ala.

A UMW spokesman said the bargaining council would return here Tuesday to decide whether to endorse the tentative agreement with the mine owners or recommend that union officers return to the bargaining table.

The tentative agreement, concluded Wednesday after two and a half months of negotiations, had raised hopes of ending the strike after two weeks.

The bargaining council recessed for the night Friday without endorsing the pact and was to return to consideration of the agreement today. But the slaying of Littlefield changed all that.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., who knew Littlefield, said Washington "must be made safe for people who visit here."

Littlefield, UMW district president for Alabama, was shot after walking into a hotel room as two Utah union leaders were being held up. The assailant fled.

The council must approve the tentative contract before it can be submitted to the 120,000 union members for ratification, a process that will take about 10 days.

"I think we're in for a three-week strike now," said UMW Vice President Mike Trbovich.

Under the tentative agreement reached Wednesday with the coal companies, UMW miners would receive wage increases of 9 per cent the first year and 3 per cent in each of the next two years, plus cost-of-living raises and a hefty package of fringe benefits. Miners now make between $42 and $50 a day.

Union sources said the bargaining council probably would recommend that the negotiating team go back to the bargaining table to seek a redistribution of benefits, as opposed to any attempt to fatten the settlement.

The steel and railroad industries already have announced about 15,000 layoffs and the government estimates that a four-week coal stoppage could idle 400,000 workers; and an eight-week stoppage, about 1.7 million.

The biggest coal users outside the steel industry are the electric utilities. Most have a two-to-three month supply, but some have less and the Tennessee Valley Authority has already appealed for voluntary reductions in electric use in its seven-state power service area.

A long strike also could prompt a major confrontation between the government and the mine workers. Ford administration officials have indicated that a rejection of the proposed contract would bring governmental intervention, possibly the invoking of the Taft-Hartley Act to order the miners back to work for an 80-day cooling off period.

Reluctant author tells about book on A. Goldberg

WASHINGTON (AP) — The author of an uncompromising biography of former Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg says he didn't want to undertake the project because he considered Goldberg a dull man.

"But you can write a book about almost anything, including artichokes," said conservative author Victor Lasky in testimony Friday at the confirmation hearings of Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Lasky added that Goldberg lacks the grace to accept Rockefeller's apology for his role in the writing of the book.

The Lasky book has stirred a political hassle among Republican and Democratic members of the Senate Rules Committee. But several senators said it will not stop Rockefeller's eventual confirmation.

Lasky's book, "Arthur J. Goldberg, The Old and the New," was virtually ignored when it was published four years ago during Goldberg's unsuccessful campaign against Rockefeller for governor of New York.

The manner in which the book was financed and Rockefeller's role in its publication is one of the two issues delaying his confirmation.

The committee will explore the other issue on Monday, calling a series of witnesses who were among those current and former New York state officials to whom Rockefeller gave more than $2 million in gifts and loans.

Chairman Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., and other committee members said Friday that neither issue taken by itself is enough to cause Rockefeller to be rejected.

Rockefeller has said he made a serious mistake by suggesting that his brother Laurence seek investors to publish the Lasky book.

Laurence Rockefeller testified Friday that it was not until the FBI began its investigation following his brother's vice presidential nomination 88 days ago that he learned he had actually financed the book entirely by himself, paying all the $65,000 cost.

Laurence Rockefeller said he agreed to underwrite the project only because it was necessary to complete it before the end of the campaign. But he assumed other backers were being sought.

"I feel very badly I did not stop it," he said. "I feel that my brother has been too generous in accepting full responsibility."

Empty ships enter Suez Canal

PORT SAID, Egypt (AP) — Four empty Egyptian passenger steamships entered the Suez Canal today on the first trip by commercial vessels since the waterway was closed in the 1967 Middle East war, Suez Canal Authority officials said.

Officials from the Canal Authority were in the lead ship, where Chief Pilot Gamal Rifaat supervised the operation. The ships sailed at 15 knots, a little more than 17 miles an hour.

The northern part of the canal to Ismailia, a distance of 42 miles, was believed relatively free of mines, ordnance and other debris although the ships have to maneuver around one sunken wreck, military sources said.

A four-nation effort to clear the canal that began after last January's Israeli-Egyptian troop separation agreement was expected to be completed next month.

Arab oil price cut unlikely

TEHERAN (LENS)— It seems unlikely that Iran and Saudi Arabia will move to lower the price of crude oil immediately, but reports that they might do it eventually, at least in real money terms, may be on the right tack.

Iran, which softened its attitude on prices during the summer, now appears to be thawing even more. Saudi Arabia has been alone among the members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in championing lower prices all this year.

Saudi Arabia and Iran account together for about half of OPEC's oil production and on their own could probably force prices down. Some Arab countries, such as Kuwait, Algerian and the Arab emirates, would probably go along with them. Kuwait and Algeria have been hard-liners on price but have recently been drawing closer to America, which initiated the drive for lower prices.

A price drop on the scale they are contemplating would not change the situation that radically; it is unlikely to amount to more than $1-$2 a barrel, which now costs $9.80.

The Saudis and Iranians, if they move, will probably try to simplify tariffs by replacing today's multiplicity of prices with a single scale, something that will happen anyhow when the Saudis take over the 40 per cent of the Western-run Aramco which they have not already swiped.

The extent of the shift in the Iranian attitude may depend on how successful western diplomats are in convincing the Shah that the present level of oil prices is driving the industrialized countries to ruin.

The Shah has been sceptical about such claims in the past and a few weeks ago upset Western diplomats when he said that the rise in oil prices has accounted for only 1.5 per cent of world inflation. This figure may be correct for the immediate impact but leaves out the domino effects.

And those domino effects are as nothing to the horror that may yet be caused by the non-recycling of surplus oil revenues.

Some say the Shah is unimpressed by the economic arguments and that his change in attitude can only be explained by something other than oil. There is not much that the Americans could promise the Shah that would tempt him to make a concession on oil prices with the possible exception of nuclear weapons, and the possibility of some quid pro quo on this ultra-delicate subject is buzzing among professional Shah-watchers.

There is also a rumbling fear that Secretary of State Kissinger may have promised the Saudis more than he can deliver in return for their continued help on oil prices.

King Faisal wants guarantees that he can pray in Jerusalem, which probably even Dr. K could not deliver to the Arabs. Just to show that it was not turning too soft, Saudi Arabia turned up the price screw on Aramco last week, which Aramco had not expected.

Things Dixon Talked About

25 YEARS AGO
Although the City Council didn't do anything but call the meeting to order last night and then immediately adjourn, the board of local improvements opened sealed bids for the construction of 102 sewer laterals in northeast Dixon.

Parents and friends are invited to the Lincoln School PTA meeting on Thursday, Nov. 17, at 3:30 p.m., in the school auditorium. A variety program of songs, dances and choral readings in the Thanksgiving theme will be given by pupils of Woodworth and Lincoln Schools.

At this season of the year Christmas shoppers are requested to remember the annual "Gifts for Yanks Who Gave" program which is sponsored annually by American Legion Posts throughout the country.

50 YEARS AGO
Everything is set for the big Farmer's Banquet to be held next Monday night. All the details have been worked out and everything will be ready when the farmers begin to arrive. The various committees have spared no expense or time to make this event the biggest thing that Dixon has ever undertaken.

The annual bazaar of the Dixon Post No. 12, American Legion, in progress every evening this week at the K.C. Hall, is drawing good crowds and all are having a fine time each night.

At the last Minister's meeting it was decided unanimously to have the union Thanksgiving services on Wednesday evening, Nov. 26, instead of Thursday morning.

U.S. stance on food bank

By EARL L. BUTZ

We should approach the World Food Conference with optimism. I am optimistic about the future ability of mankind to feed itself. I expect consumption levels and nutrition to continue improving as they have in most of the last 20 years. I have confidence in the ability of the international community to work together and to avoid catastrophe.

The World Food Conference is part of this effort. May I reaffirm the dedication of the U.S. Government to the objectives of that Conference as spelled out by the United Nations. Essentially, these are to consider programs and policies to increase food production in developing countries, improve consumption patterns in all countries, strengthen food security for the world, and improve world trade in the interest of greater world food security.

Along with the discussion of ways in which to provide incentives to farmers in developing as well as developed countries, we will also use the occasion of the World Food Conference to encourage an internationally coordinated system of food reserves. There has been much misunderstanding about what we mean when we say the U.S. Government is prepared to participate fully in an international food reserve system. Let me try to make this a bit clearer.

We have never questioned the need for food reserves. What we believe is, however, that importing countries have to take a much greater share of the responsibility for carrying their own reserves than they have in the past. Importing countries should feel the need to be protected from temporary shortages and other supply difficulties when market conditions change rapidly.

Intelligently managed reserves can be used to help stabilize market extremes and to assure consumers in importing countries a continuous supply of needed food. Too, exporting countries should also—within their normal marketing system—carry reserves that any prudent seller needs. Thus the seller should follow the adage: "You can't sell from an empty wagon."

We think that the distribution of reserves more widely throughout the world—among both importers and exporters—will improve the operation of the market considerably, without dampening the incentives farmers need to keep production going full tilt ahead.

Some believe that carrying an inventory cushion is the responsibility of the seller—but in this country the seller is not the U.S. Government. The selling function lies with the producer and with others at various levels of the market between producer and exporter or retailer.

The seller in some countries will be a government agency. In that case the reserves held by the seller may be in government hands. We think the question of where reserves will be held is one that should be decided by internal policies of the countries involved—but in all events should include both exporters and importers.

Secondly, with respect to food aid, the United States is prepared to make a firm commitment. Naturally, should a food reserve system become operative, it should take account of the food aid commitment. But we don't intend to wait for reserves to meet food aid needs. Neither do we intend that the reserves should become simply a food aid cushion discouraging production in developing nations.

Related to the reserve question, we anticipate that the World Food Conference will recommend an international system of production and supply information. We wholeheartedly support that idea, to make the worldwide system more efficient and give advance notice of developing country emergency demands.

Forced education

Judge W. Arthur Garrity, author of forced busing, says, "Parents do not have the right to keep their children out of school. The state has responsibility for the children's education and welfare."

This illustrates the real meaning of liberalism. Are the people the servants of the state? Do children belong to the state, or to their parents?

If laws saying children had to attend school were annulled there would be a better attendance, more studying and real learning among your students.

When you have laws saying people must do certain things they resent this. Some young folks drop out of school just to show the authorities that the students can do as they please.

You can think of many other reasons why your educational system would be better. The parents would be responsible for informing their children on the value of a good education in helping the children to make more money, acquire a good living, etc.

Over 50 per cent of the voters in Lee County did not take advantage of the privilege of voting. When your senators or representatives refuse to make corrections in laws beneficial to the citizens, then the non-voters have little right to complain.

Choose and vote next time for candidates who have practical experience in operating farms, retail stores and manufacturing plants. Beware of electing too many lawyers.

We have a nation in trouble and the laws Congress passes say that the senators and representatives do not care. The chances are that you will have harder times and more inflation.

Youth appreciation

Twenty years ago, a North Carolina group of Optimists decided too much attention was being given to the negative acts of youth and too little attention given to the vast majority of youth accepting fulfilling roles as responsible citizens. To bring about recognition of the positive actions and contributions of young people, Youth Appreciation Week was inaugurated.

During the past 20 years, this observance has grown to where it is now sponsored by Optimist clubs throughout North America. It has as its objective to publicize the fact that today's youth are not the selfish, lazy degenerates that too many adults fantasize. The vast majority of youth is well informed, concerned, willing and interested in becoming involved in efforts to improve our society. While the vitality and spirit of youth need the wisdom and experience of adults as support in efforts toward the successful achievement of their goals, it follows each adult has a responsibility to assist youth through the transitional stage toward adulthood. It is indeed important that we give the needed recognition to deserving youth, but we must not become complacent and overlook the necessity for continued personal dedication and involvement with community improvement.

Youth Appreciation Week is a vehicle through which all adults and youth may work together for the good of all.

"Ho, Ho, Ho Yourself!"

In serious recession

DELAND, Fla. (AP) — Saying "we are in a serious recession," a member of the Federal Trade Commission has called for re-institution of wage and price controls.

"All of my training, what knowledge I have, and my instincts tell me that we are in a serious recession," Paul R. Dixon said Friday during a speech at Stetson University. "I do not join those in our society who believe it is inevitable that we must endure periodic booms and busts.

"Each recession inflicts its worst pains upon those least able to endure them," said Dixon, a former chairman and present member of the FTC. "I suggest the reinstitution of wage-price controls...at least until a re-examination of the laws of the land can be frankly and seriously undertaken."

Army in search of its general

By TOM TIEDE

DOVER, Del. (NEA)— Edgar Coleman, Ellen Ray and the custodian at The Presbyterian Church were among the millions of eligible Americans who did not vote. For shame? Maybe.

Ray and the custodian, at least, must be censured. Mencken would have classified them Boobus Americanus. She says she did not vote because her hair was "a mess" and she thus feared being seen in public; he says he snubbed the polls because "Nine years ago I was promised a job on the highway department—I didn't get it and I ain't had anything to do with the government since."

But Coleman is something else. And he may represent millions of other nonvoting Americans who may be something else. He, a recently discharged GI, 22 years old, did not vote, did not even register to vote, because he wants no part of traditional politics; "I don't like the Republicans, I don't like the Democrats, so what else is there? Nobody in politics represents my point of view."

His logic may have flaws but his conclusion is one increasingly heard today. Many citizens, in particular younger ones, feel the political system overlooks them if they do not conform to the Republican or Democratic molds, or for that matter the liberal or the conservative or the trade union or the civil rights line. Thus isolated, many are apathetic.

What Coleman considers as more important would be "somebody who speaks to the real majority in this country." That is to say to the moderate independents, the men and women who are neither zealously right or left, elephant or donkey. These are not eunuchs, Coleman insists, rather people who consider each political or social question on its merits rather than its affiliations. "Let me tell you, if somebody came along to appeal to these people, who could truly represent their thinking, he could win any election, even the presidency."

He has a good point. And although there is no sign the traditionalist politicians will recognize it, a growing number of concerned political observers already do. Among the latter is Jack Conway, president of the Washington-based citizen action group known as Common Cause; he believes the day of the exclusive two-party system is passing, the the Republicans and Democratic organizations have reduced themselves to mere "fund raisers and candidate choosers," that a political vacuum is forming which must be filled.

"Look at the statistics," Conway says. "The last Gallup poll on voter identification indicates that only 19 per cent of the people identify with the Republicans, only 37 per cent identify with the Democrats—and 44 per cent are undecided. These undecided, or independents, are a whole new group that nobody talks to and everybody ignores. They can't be ignored for long. There's a lot of power there."

The power, however, if it is to be harnessed, will not be done so on the cheap. Conway does not believe the apathetic independents can be mobilized by extremism, such as a George Wallace bid, nor by intellectualism, such as that being offered in Gene McCarthy's infant third party movement. "My feeling," says Conway, "is the bulk of these independents are in the center of the political spectrum. I think they are looking for common sense leadership."

If so there is a danger the independent ranks will never march to the polls, common sense being a long dead casualty of American political action. Yet there is always the hope. Non-voter Edgar Coleman, for one, says he is thinking of putting an ad in the newspapers:

"Wanted, leaders for apathetic Americans. Must be able to talk and think straight. Enthusiasm required. Experience not necessary, in fact may be detrimental. Apply now for 1976 vacancies. An equal opportunity employer."

Water-sewer furor

By DON OAKLEY

The closer the nation gets to a pollution-free environment, the more it is going to come up against the hard fact that the goal of "zero discharge," as mandated by public law, may be an impossibility.

In the case of water, the Federal Water Pollution Control Act defines pollution as "the manmade or man-induced alteration of the chemical, physical, biological and radiological integrity of water." All discharges that can pass through waste treatment facilities are considered to be pollutants—whether they are toxic or not, whether they are damaging or not or whether they can be assimilated by the environment or not.

This, under stringent interpretation, has been held to include even the waste discharges of home water softeners, which consist primarily of hardness minerals removed from the original water, plus salt, which is used in the recharging process.

In no part of the country have such discharges been shown to be harmful to humans or animals or the environment, claims the Water Quality Association, a trade association of some 3,000 manufacturers, retail dealers and suppliers in the water-conditioning industry.

Yet, it says, under the guise of pollution control, the Environmental Protection Agency has encouraged many states to establish "unreasonably low" limits for salt and mineral solids.

In California, for example, salt has been classified along with pesticides and heavy metals as a toxic material. Consequently, waste effluent standards are often more restrictive than drinking water standards.

Many California communities already prohibit water softening devices in the home that recharge automatically rather than at a central location and are only a step away from complete prohibition.

For the consumer, says the association, such prohibitions result in improved sewage but poorer quality water in the home.

Actually, it argues, softened water helps to conserve natural resources and to control environmental pollution by substantially reducing the amount of soaps, detergents, phosphates and other cleaning wastes which enter our lakes and streams.

Farm-to-market roads victim of oil prices

CENTRALIA, Ill. (AP) — America's farm-to-market roads, one factor reflected in the cost of food, are being washed out by the gush of oil prices, officials say.

Across the nation's farm belt and in rural areas of most states, public officials and paving industry spokesmen say spring will bring back the gravel road—slower transportation with increased hazards that may be reflected in higher supermarket prices.

Prices of paving oil, used in low-grade asphalt and for holding down dust and crushed rock on country roads, have nearly doubled. What cost the Illinois Highway Department 24 cents a gallon in 1973 ran 45 to 46 cents a gallon in 1974. Caught with short budgets, county and township road officials had to reduce road maintenance by half, often patching what needed repaving.

One trade publication estimated that road materials are up an average of 30 per cent.

Mel Larsen, an Illinois Highway Department engineer, said oil surfaces don't weather much more than two years. The second year they can be patched but not the third. Most will have to revert to gravel, he said, especially with a hard winter.

There are about three million miles of such road in the state, much of which will be two years old this spring.

Compounding the problem, federal maintenance funds are available for only about a third of the roads. State motor fuel tax revenues also have skidded because of the fuel-saving 55 mile-per-hour speed limit and reduced driving. Indiana road revenues dropped by about $10 million in 1973 and some Illinois counties took a four per cent cut.

All this comes at a time when farm-area rail lines which once shared the burden are being abandoned and farm production is increasing.

Some new 20-ton grain and livestock trucks, built so large to improve transportation efficiency, were too heavy for 85 per cent of the country's farm roads and bridges even before prices rose.

Jack Trotter, 51, superintendent of highways for Illinois' Jefferson County, said, "We're going backwards. Eventually someone is going to have to absorb it. If the farmer can't get his product to market on time, or if he hits a hole in the road and breaks an axle or spills a load of grain, someone is going to have to pay for it."

George Goggin, a spokesman for the National Asphalt Paving Association in Washington, said, "It's a problem all over the country."

In Indianapolis, Arthur Graham, 51, editor of Construction Digest, said, "I think they're getting fairly close to a crisis situation, particularly with our farm-to-market roads. They have usually been at the bottom of the heap when it comes to getting any money. The President is pleading for all-out, 100 per cent farm production and not enough attention is being paid to getting these products off the farm to the marketplace. It will almost inevitably mean higher prices."

"Transportation is about 20 per cent of your on-shelf cost of food. Anything that slows it down or inhibits it in any way is inevitably going to be passed on to the consumer," he said. "We think it is a very crucial situation."

FOLLOWING psychiatric care as a result of what she termed an "identity crisis," Margaret Trudeau, wife of Canada's prime minister, revealed she was not mentally prepared for her role as the PM's wife and yearns for the day the couple can return to private life.

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE B-696: The Rev. Thomas, aged 55, is a Methodist clergyman.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "I follow your 'Worry Clinic' faithfully and admire your stress on simple language."

"Plus your urging people to employ 'Horse Sense' in all matters, including even religion."

"For unnecessary feuding between various Christian denominations is often ludicrous. And confuses many would-be converts in foreign lands."

"For some missionaries tell the natives they can't go to heaven unless they are baptized by total immersion in water."

"Our Methodists, as well as Catholics and Presbyterians, prefer sprinkling, though we give our new members their option."

"And some denominations baptize by pouring, which was the ancient Hebrew method of anointing kings."

"Actually, isn't baptism merely a visual external symbol of an inner change of heart?"

"Once you mentioned in this connection that the Arabic number '1' means the same whether in eight-point type or extending one mile high upon the face of a mountain."

"For the amount of ink in the Arabic number '1' doesn't make it '2' or '5' or any other number."

"It is still the same regardless of size."

"Well, isn't baptism in that same category?"

"For the water itself doesn't erase sins, even if full of all the latest modern soaps and detergents!"

"So why make such a crucial issue out of whether a penitent new convert is baptized by sprinkling or pouring or total immersion?"

"When Jesus thus went down into the water of the Jordan River to be baptized by John the Baptist, that doesn't mean he was immersed."

"For John had no basin or even a pitcher or tincup to carry water to shore, so it was natural that he stand in the water, probably to his knees, so he could dip up water in his cupped palm, to pour or sprinkle on the heads of his converts."

"Furthermore in the 16th Chapter of Acts, when an earthquake freed Paul and Silas and the jailer was going to kill himself because he thought the prisoners had all escaped, Paul restrained him."

"Then Paul preached to the jailer and converted him, as well as his household."

"And he (jailer) took them the same night, washed their stripes, and the Bible says he and his household were immediately baptized."

"Dr. Crane, does it seem logical that in a jail or the jailer's adjacent home, there'd be a swimming pool big enough for baptism by immersion?"

"Isn't it more logical to assume that Paul probably used the same basin of water to baptize the jailer and his household?"

"Even in the great metropolis of Rome, not many jailers or even wealthy citizens had swimming pools!"

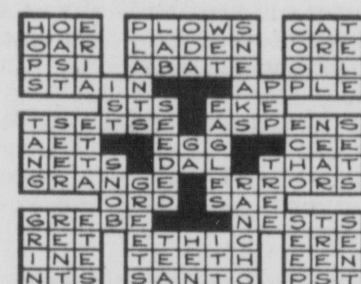

"Flush toilets and running water were not in use, so the jailer probably had access only to pails of water and wash basins, unless they sought a river."

"And with a wrecked jailhouse, would the jailer at midnight be inclined to walk far away to a river to be immersed?"

"Dr. Crane, ask your millions of readers what they think about my logic, for didn't Jesus criticize people for straining at gnats and quibbling unnecessarily over picayune details?"

Fashion magic by numbers

By HELEN HENNESSY
NEW YORK — (NEA) — The new fashion math proves that four times two can equal 16, and it's all tied in with fighting inflation with fashion multiplication!

In this age of overrated prices and underrated budgets, the poor inflated dollar not only has to count, it has to multiply. And that is just what Palo Alto by Fairfield has managed to do for your budget. They've designed coordinated separates that actually stretch your dollar.

Four Tops
By purchasing four tops color-coded to a skirt and pants, you can achieve 16 different fashion looks — all for under $70!

Here's Palo Alto's special formula for your fall fashion math: Take a red turtleneck long-sleeve sweater at $9; a red, white and blue striped halter, $7, and a matching striped cardigan at $13. Add a navy sleeveless pullover, $11. For bottoms, buy a red flare skirt, $11, and fly-front navy pants, $19. Now try these 16 costume looks...

To start, tuck in the long-sleeve turtleneck, add a scarf and you have outfit number one. For another look, add the sleeveless navy pullover.

The gaily striped cardigan and pants add up to still another look. To expand the wardrobe even further, button the cardigan over the turtleneck or navy pullover and presto... two more changes.

Using the skirt, there are combos galore to play with. Pull on the red turtleneck over the flip skirt and you're off to town, shopping or the office. Add the

Marine Corps Auxiliary

A meeting for the Marine Corps League Auxiliary is planned for 8 p.m. Tuesday in the VFW Club when final plans will be made for the "Meal for Winning Wheels" to be sponsored by the American Legion, VFW and Marine Corps League Auxiliaries from 4 to 7:30 p.m. Nov. 21 in the VFW Club.

Miss Deborah Louise Cies, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Cies, Dixon, and Michael James Shannahan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Shannahan, Sterling, exchanged marriage vows Nov. 9 in the Highlands Inn Chapel, Carmel, Calif.

The candlelight wedding was performed by the Rev. Charles L. Moore.

Ivory Gown
The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a floor-length gown of ivory Qiana jersey fashioned with an empire bodice featuring a sunburst neckline and tapered sleeves. The gown was complemented by a chapel-length hooded veil of sheer ivory chiffon, and she wore a gold pin belonging to her great-great-maternal grandmother, Mrs. Maria Mathews. She also carried Mrs. Mathews's linen handkerchief, which has been carried by five generations of brides in the family. In her shoe was a sixpence, a gift from friends in England, and her bouquet was a cascading arrangement of white Garnette roses, white gardenias and baby's breath.

Miss Christine Ege, Kansas City, Mo., who attended the bride as maid of honor, wore a full-length navy-blue velvet jumper with a sheer white blouse styled with a sunburst neckline and long puffed sleeves. White satin ribbons accented her bouquet of three white Sweetheart roses.

Paul Bittiker, San Bruno, Calif., served as the bridegroom's best man, and wedding guests were ushered by the bride's brothers, Michael and Thomas Cies.

The service was followed by a reception in the Fireplace Room of the Highlands Inn when guests were registered by the bride's sister, Miss Marti Cies, and the refreshment table was centered by a two-tiered cake decorated with white roses and topped by miniature wedding bells.

Wedding Dinner

The reception preceded a dinner hosted by the parents of the bride and bridegroom in the Hog's Breath Inn, Carmel, and the bride's grandmother, Mrs. B. C. Bunker, Tipton, Iowa, was hostess for a bridal luncheon at the Pine Inn, Carmel.

The new Mrs. Shannahan, a graduate of Dixon High School and the Atlantic Airline School, Kansas City, is presently employed as a hostess for Braniff International Airways. Her husband graduated from Newman Central Catholic High School, Sterling, and Rockhurst College, Kansas City, and he is currently employed as an audit supervisor for the Coopers and Lybrand Company in San Francisco, Calif.

The newlyweds are residing at 605 Shelter Creek Lane, Apt. 144, San Bruno, Calif.

Presbyterian PAF dinner and program

The First Presbyterian Church PAF will meet for a 6:30 p.m. scramble dinner and program Monday in the church social hall.

Unique soup tureens

By JEAN BARNES

Soup is the standby of the household executive confronted with last-minute guests or a "too-busy" day. Yet that simple bowl of soup has inspired many of the world's finest artists and craftsmen for more than three centuries.

A visit to the Campbell Museum at Camden, N.J., will attest to this. This unique museum was founded in 1966 and its collection consists of objects pertaining to the service of soup and its equipage.

There has been no special effort made to preserve these symbols of elegant dining and many of the early ones have been lost through breakage or scattered throughout the world. Recognizing this need, the Campbell Soup Company set about to assemble and house a collection of tureens which would include the finest examples available.

The 18th century is unmatched in history for its elegant formal dining and it was during this period that the tureen became an important part of the dinner service.

The word "tureen" probably derives from the Latin word "terrinus" meaning earthen and can refer to either the large covered vessel from which soup is served or smaller bowls which contain sauces or gravy.

Assembling this unique collection was often difficult. Because of their historical significance or artistic merit, many are considered "national treasures" and are not allowed to leave the country of their origin. Thus, it became necessary to locate similar outstanding examples by scouting countries other than the one of origin.

In describing the collection for you, it is possible to use a wide variety of adjectives. It seems best to quote from the museum catalogue, which states, "No other part of the dinner service has lent itself to the unusual and bizarre in form and design as have tureens. They run the gamut from ship to fish, fowl to animals, vegetables and fruits to flowers and often a combination of several. They may not all be appetizing and they may not all be objects of beauty but they are often surprising — if not startling — and certainly not dull."

Whether you have an old tureen, or have explored the realm of the new ones now on the market, you will find that the soup tureen adds an elegant focal point to both family and festive dining.

It takes great finesse not to

By Oswald & James Jacoby
The fact that it is there may well be a good reason to climb a mountain, it is not always a good reason to take a finesse.

South was one of those compulsive finessers. He wasted no time plunking dummy's jack of spades on West's 10 spot, whereupon East produced the queen. The presence of both minor suit aces in the West hand, together with a five-card spade suit, saw poor South losing three spade tricks and these two aces.

All South had to do to insure his contract was to refuse that spade finesse at trick one and let the 10 run around to his king.

South would knock out either minor suit ace and West would play a second spade. This time South should finesse dummy's jack. The finesse would lose, but East wouldn't have a spade to lead back. South would have time to knock out the other ace and wind up making four no-trump.

Of course, a South player using mirrors could refuse the finesse the second time round and make five odd, but that play would cost him his contract if West held the queen of spades. This way the contract was safe. 16

Dear Ann

by Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I decided that if I heard of just one more "Anonymous," I'd write. Well, I did, so here I am. This one is Parents Anonymous, a group whose goal is to control themselves, "just for today," against abusing their children verbally or physically. I'm sure the first such group was Alcoholics Anonymous. But now we have Gamblers Anonymous, Migraines Anonymous, Cancer Anonymous, Dropouts Anonymous, Asthmatics Anonymous, Crooks Anonymous, Overeaters Anonymous, and Parents Of Youths In Trouble Anonymous. I'm sure there must be several others.

Doesn't this seem a bit much? It must say something about our society. But what? I'd like your opinion. — Letter Writer Anonymous.

Dear Writer: Of course it says something, not only about our society but about humanity. The message is, "Misery loves company, but company can reduce misery and bring comfort and encouragement."

I cannot give a blanket endorsement to all "Anonymous" groups because I have not investigated them all, but I do know that many are extremely useful and strictly on the up and up — especially Alcoholics Anonymous, Gamblers Anonymous, Overeaters Anonymous — and Parents Anonymous.

The cloak of anonymity protects people from whatever shame or stigma might be placed on them by a cruel and unsympathetic society. I

A scramble salad supper was planned for the circle's December meeting with Mrs. C. E. Knigge.

Polly's Problem
DEAR POLLY — My daughter, 1½, decided to share her milk with several of my house plants. Now they have a sour milk smell and mold on the soil. Is there any way to get rid of this odor without having to repot the plants? — MRS. M. R.

DEAR POLLY — I hope manufacturers of electric blankets will note my Pet Peeve. When I want to change the dial on my blanket during the night I find I cannot see the numbers without turning the light on or at least putting on my glasses. With all the present day know-how it seems someone could come up with an answer for this. Here's hoping. — ELEANOR.

DEAR POLLY — I have some ideas for Nora who has all those aluminum foil pans. Glue deep bottle caps (such as come on catsup) around the edges of such a pan. Place a container for water in the center. Put paint in the cups and the aspiring artist has a palette.

Cut the bottom bars from a couple of wire coat hangers, leaving an inch on each end. Punch holes near the ends of foil cake pans and insert the cut wires on the hangers. Add feed, hang on tree branches and your birds have feeders.

To make a picture frame paint a divided foil TV dinner tray any desired color and then mount small pictures in the sections. — KATHY.

"Good night dear... and sleep tight"

That's what he always says. But it never happens! That's because you can't have both on your cramped, crowded old-fashioned double bed.

If you're having a "falling out," here's a great good night story.

It begins with a new modern queen size Beautyrest. It gives 20% more spacious bed room. (The King size gives 50% more.) Togetherness is always optional. But here's the rest of this story.

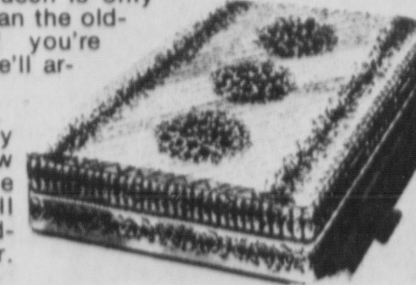

Beautyrest has more than twice the usual number of coils. That means more support. And sleepers have a choice of five Beautyrest firmnesses. That means there's one just right for you. But firmness alone doesn't guarantee proper body support.

That's why Beautyrest is made flexibly firm, not hard and "boardy." It has separate coils that act separately to firmly support only that part of your body they're under. Hip coils support hips . . . shoulder coils support shoulders, while others firm-up and support your back or sides. Beautyrest is different because it conforms — and so comfortably. It gives every part of your body a good night's rest.

And the cost? The Queen is only a penny more per night than the old-fashioned size. And if you're "tight" on your budget, we'll arrange very special credit terms.

P.S. No need to buy new furniture for your new Queen size inexpensive Bed Stretchers will make your present bedstead longer and wider. Ask!

This makes it the highest energy electron beam in the world, the scientists said in announcing their achievement Friday.

Art lecture at Sauk Valley

The Sauk Area Arts Council, with the assistance of the Illinois Arts Council, Nov. 23 will sponsor a lecture-slide presentation by an art historian, a potter and a painter from noon until 3 p.m. in Room 1K4 at Sauk Valley College.

Arts Council spokeswoman Milly Cole said the program, by three artists affiliated with Luther College, Decorah, Iowa, is open to the public. It will be conducted in an informal fashion with lecture and slide presentations to be followed by question and answer sessions. Refreshments will be served and a registration fee of $2 for non-students and $1 for students will be charged.

The three participating artists and the titles of their talks are: Dr. Loredo Adelman, art historian, "Art and Culture in the Modern World"; assistant professor Douglas Eckheart, painter, "Visual Interpretation of the Oneota Valley Environment"; and professor Dean Schwartz, potter, "A Personal Response to our Rich Heritage of Pottery."

Dr. Adelman received his master of arts and Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota and a bachelor of arts from Westmore College. He also attended San Jose State College and Denver University and has traveled and studied in Europe and the Orient. A former resident of France, he has served as instructor of vocal music at Akron, been a NDEA IV Fellow and earned a fellowship from the Department of Art History at the University of Minnesota.

Ex-burglar

BREMERTON, Wash. (AP) — Larry Bomstead gained an expertise with locks during a career as a burglar.

These days, Bomstead, 32, advises businesses on security systems and alarms to foil would-be burglars. And he hopes to use the profits from his locksmith business to pay back his victims.

Bomstead is the proprietor of Alexie's Olympic Locksmith and Repair.

"I became a locksmith because I was a very good burglar and I do know locks," he says. "It's a natural occupation."

Two years ago he left McNeil Island federal penitentiary after a three-and-a-half year stay that capped a prison career Bomstead began at 21.

In addition to burglary, Bomstead has served time for armed robbery and armed bank robbery.

Both incidents occurred sometime between 5 and 9 p.m. Police are investigating the incidents.

New phone numbers in Nachusa

A crew of about 20 Centel employees began work today to change the telephone numbers of each of the 101 customers in Nachusa.

As installer-repairmen visit each home individually other telephone crews will be busy splicing the new lines at four separate points while other employees make connections in the Dixon Central Office.

The number change marks the completion of a $50,000 project involving the burying of miles of cable from Nachusa to the Dixon Central Office. Prior to the change, all telephone lines in Nachusa fed to the switching equipment in Nachusa's Central Office, where connections were made with the called number.

After the change, Nachusa telephones will be connected directly with the Central Office in Dixon where the switching will occur.

"This economical and efficient solution was possible due to today's technology. Twenty years ago, though, it wouldn't have been very practical," explains J. K. Hyatt, Dixon District manager for Centel.

"If we hadn't gone this way, we would have had to increase the size of the Nachusa building or build a new one because of new toll ticketing equipment which will be put in use in the future," he adds.

The change also eliminates the problem of maintaining a central office five miles from the main office.

"The daily expenditures in handling 100 lines in the Dixon Central Office is no different than if they were within the city. But out in Nachusa, those 100 lines meant an additional load because of the mileage out and back each time there was a case of trouble," Hyatt says.

New numbers for Nachusa customers will be found in the new 1974 telephone directories which are being distributed.

Butter use increases

WASHINGTON (AP) — The per-capita consumption of butter is up slightly this year, the first increase since 1968, says the Agriculture Department.

Part of the reason, officials say, is that retail butter prices declined some in 1974 while prices of margarine — traditionally a much lower priced spread — soared.

According to a dairy situation report published Friday, per-capita butter consumption this year will average 4.2 pounds, up two-tenths of a pound from 1973. Butter eating had declined since 1968 when it was 4.9 pounds per capita.

Margarine still is the big leader, expected to average 11.6 pounds per capita in 1974, up from 11.3 in 1973 and 1972.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics says the retail price of butter averaged 93.5 cents per pound nationally in September, the most recent month studied, while margarine was 63.7 cents.

A year earlier, in September 1973, butter was 99.9 cents per pound and margarine 41.2 cents, the BLS said. Butter climbed to just over $1 per pound last January and dipped to a low this year of 90.3 cents per pound. Margarine has climbed partly because of higher prices for vegetable oil, its main ingredient.

"Third quarter butter sales were up almost a fifth from a year ago, indicating that many consumers still prefer butter if the price is favorable," the USDA report said. "Although butter prices may rise seasonally the rest of the year, margarine prices are expected to continue strong. Therefore, butter sales will likely remain strong," officials said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are in a good position to hold 1974-crop soybeans in case prices go up over the next six months or so as they have following harvest the past two years, says the Agriculture Department.

"Because of short supplies and continuing strong demand, prices received by farmers for soybeans this fall are averaging about $8 per bushel, sharply above the $5.50 received during harvest a year ago," the Department's Outlook and Situation Board said Friday.

The board, in a preliminary report on the fats and oils situation, did not predict what soybean prices may be in a few months. But it said "prices are expected to strengthen further," during the soybean marketing year, which ends next Aug. 31.

"Farmers are strong holders of soybeans since they have adequate storage facilities and know that in the past two years it has been profitable to store soybeans at harvest and sell later," the report said. Last season, it said, soybeans rose from around $5 per bushel in November 1973 to a high of $7.55 last August before the new crop was ready.

"Furthermore, many producers who suffered sharp crop losses will try to maximize returns on their remaining soybean harvest," the report said.

The 1974 soybean crop is estimated at about 1.24 billion bushels, down nearly one-fifth from the record harvest last year.

White pine wood used to build first U.S. homes

When the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, the forest primeval which greeted their view was made up of white pines, which the Indians already prized for medicinal properties. The new arrivals put the trees to new use — they cut the tall, straight trunks to build the first houses of which we have any record in America.

Later, the newcomers adopted the Indians' attitude about the medical value of the white pine, especially for lung complaints. The Indians also used bundles of twigs in their medicinal sweat baths. The Pilgrims even made their shillings of its wood, and stamped them with its image.

The tall straight trunks, and the general usefulness of the pine, eventually were the downfall of the handsome trees which once dominated vast regions of the North American continent. Since the wood was unequalled for everything from match sticks to masts for sailing ships, the trees continued to fall. Today, the last and southernmost virgin stand in the Midwest is protected at White Pines Forest State Park in Ogle County, 12 miles north of Dixon in northwestern Illinois.

Today, there are 385 acres in the park, which required nearly 25 years to become a reality. When the first white settlers arrived, they found a stand of white pine which stretched back a quarter-mile from Pine Creek's east bank, and covered 700 acres.

As early as 1903, a group of Ogle County nature lovers spearheaded a successful drive in the legislature for appropriation of $30,000 for purchase of the land. The measure, however, was vetoed, and it was not until 1927 that the remainder of the forest was acquired for use as a park.

The timber stand has historic as well as natural values, since it lies in the heart of the so-called Black Hawk country with its many associations with the Indian chief who delayed, if he could not entirely halt, the removal of his people from the Rock River Valley they cherished.

In May of 1832, an important engagement in the Black Hawk War was fought nearby, above Dixon. Poorly disciplined volunteers, commanded by Gov. John Reynolds, were routed and put to flight, but the Indian victory was only temporary, and eventually they were subdued and driven from the Rock River country.

Black Hawk himself knew not only exile, but the ignominy of being placed in custody of his hated rival, Keokuk.

Even the blacktop road which forms the south boundary of the park has a history — it was once part of the old Chicago-Iowa trail, the chief route for many years linking east and west across this section of Illinois.

White pines are not the only natural attractions in the state park which bears their name. Against moss-covered cliffs covered with trailing vines, are stands of hardwoods including maple, ash, elm, oak, basswood and hickory, their shade brightened in season by the trout lily, Solomon's seal, bloodroot, blue-eyed grass, spring beauty and hepatica. The forest shelters many common fur-bearing species, and birds are numerous, including the pine finch and pine warblers, while winter brings many northern species.

White Pines is one of the Conservation Department's state parks with a lodge offering overnight accommodations to visitors, on the European plan. The lodge, open from April 1 to Nov. 1, has a lounge in one wing and dining room in the other. There are 13 one-room log cabins, and three four-room cabins, all fully equipped.

For those bringing their own accommodations, there are tent sites and a few trailer sites with a disposal station. Picnic areas have water, fireplaces, tables and playground equipment. Winding through the virgin pines are miles of foot trails which eventually rise to the crest of the bluff at the western edge of the park. In winter, there is sledding on the park's rolling hills, and in summer, an interpretive program operates to help the visitor better relate to his environment.

HUB views film

Project "HUB" (Help Us Breathe) met on Thursday, in the Doctors' Dining Room at K.S.B. Hospital with 22 members in attendance.

The film "What is Emphysema," was shown after which the business meeting was conducted.

Empty two pound coffee cans were brought to the meeting. They will be used to collect Betty Crocker coupons to buy a breathing machine to be used as a standby for persons while their machine is being repaired, or in case of an emergency. These cans will be placed in convenient locations and everyone is urged to save coupons for this purpose.

It was recommended to set the next meeting for April instead of March.

Duke reprimands Bob Blackman

CHICAGO (AP)—Illinois Coach Bob Blackman, reprimanded for what was termed unsportsmanlike conduct, says he "wouldn't be much of a man or coach" if he had not commented about the officiating in last Saturday's Illini loss to Michigan.

Blackman was reprimanded Friday by Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke for his objections to the officiating in the 14-6 loss to the Wolverines. He claimed officials were wrong in not allowing an Illinois touchdown in the late minutes which might have led to a possible tie by the Illini.

Duke, who earlier in the week reprimanded Coach Woody Hayes of Ohio State for his remarks against officials in a 16-13 loss to Michigan State, invoked the same rule against Blackman as he did against Hayes.

Blackman, reached in Minneapolis, where the Illini face the University of Minnesota today, said: "Had I not commented on this poor officiating I wouldn't be much of a man or coach. Our guys had worked awfully hard and it was unfair."

"I do hate to think that I've received a reprimand for unsportsmanlike conduct. I've made many mistakes in my lifetime, but never have I been guilty of unsportsmanlike conduct."

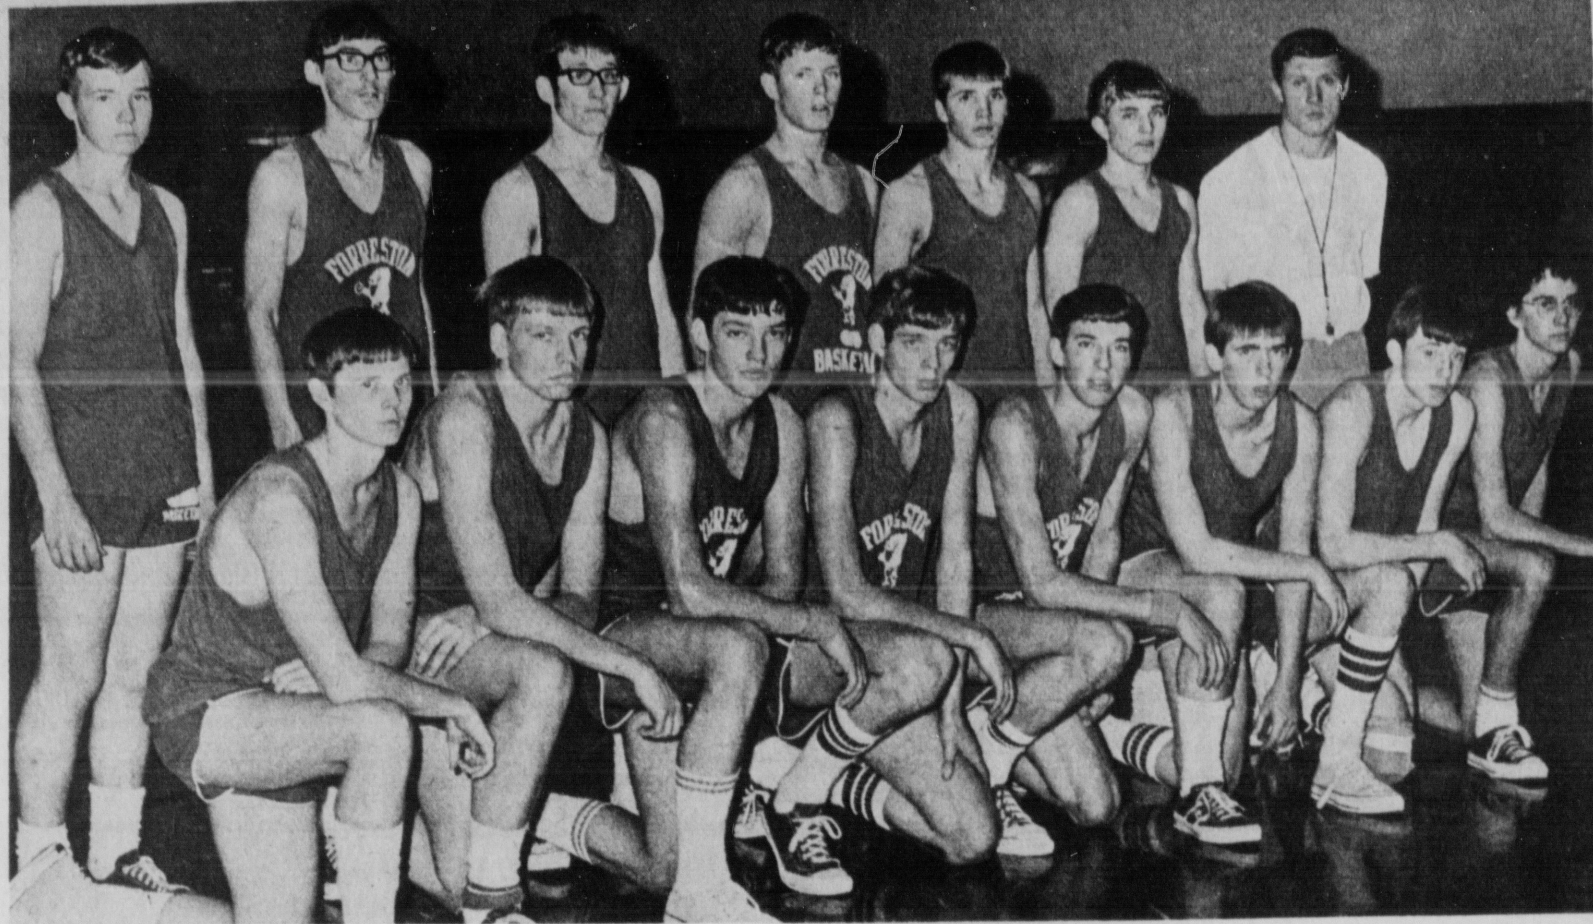

Blackman continued: "If on the other hand, beyond a shadow of a doubt, our players are deprived of something they have earned, I sure as hell would speak up again. Yet I can't foresee this ever happening."

Duke said in reprimanding the Illini coach: "It is unfortunate that I must cite Bob Blackman of the University of Illinois . . . but I have made this finding pursuant to my responsibility under conference procedures."

"I have notified Coach Blackman of the penalty which has been assessed against him and of his right to appeal to the Conference Compliance Committee if he desires to do so."

Blackman, like Ohio State's Hayes, is subject to suspension of one game should there be recurrence of the same violation.

Women's athletics is not a fad

EDITORS NOTE: It will come as no surprise that women athletes at the nation's colleges do not get the same treatment as their male counterparts. But they may soon, because a law called Title IX says universities must provide equal athletic opportunities for both sexes. Here, in the third of a five-part series on "from bake sales to half the pie," is a report on what is was like being a woman athlete before Title IX.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

The typical athletic director in the typical college athletic department is not a women hater. On his desk, next to all the trophies, is a family portrait showing his wife, and maybe a daughter or two.

Outside his carpeted office, there's another smiling female who pours him coffee, opens his mail and types his letters. He'll say he's all for women.

But, in many cases, his athletic budget won't reflect it.

"I don't understand what goes on in the heads of those athletic directors," says Dan Bakinowski, who gratuitously coached Boston University's women's crew team to two national championships last summer. "They feel the women athletes are going to go away. If they think that, then they're only fooling themselves."

"Women's athletics is not a fad. There are just too many of them out there. They have so much enthusiasm and it isn't going to stop. The ADs had better wise up."

And if the colleges want to continue receiving their federal checks for assistance in various areas, some athletic departments are going to have to change their emphasis; because the long arm of the law is on the way to help women's sports.

Title IX of the 1972 Education Act prohibits discrimination in any university program. That means if men are provided athletic teams, facilities and equipment, women must be provided the same opportunities.

With Title IX about to be fully enforced, opportunities are opening up for women's athletics on many campuses, prompting Anne Findlay Chamberlain, a first-year scholarship recipient at Penn State, to say: "It used to be that we had to wear skirts and nylons to a game. But that whole era has changed now and we don't have to be embarrassed to be female athletes anymore, even though I never was."

The past is not so encouraging to women. Those days were the dark ages of women sports — an era that still exists on some campuses today — when the men had the whole pie and the women were lucky if they got some crumbs.

The Boston University women's crew team won two national championships this past summer, and they did it without one cent from that school's athletic department, which gave men's crew $35,000 and two full-time coaches last year.

"I think it's ridiculous the way we are treated," says Betsy Hochberg, a member of the team. "They thought we would go away. They just wouldn't take us seriously."

"We practiced at six in the morning so we wouldn't get in the way of the men's team, and also because Dan (Bak-inowski), our volunteer coach, worked from 9 to 5."

"To compete in meets," Miss Hochberg says, "we had to borrow boats from other schools. We fund-raised with bake sales, raffles and car washes. We even resorted to a rowing marathon. We set up a swimming pool in front of the student union and rowed in two-hour shifts, 24 hours a day for one whole week. People came by and threw change into the pool."

"It was like begging. But the money had to be raised somehow. BU wasn't going to give it to us and we wanted to compete."

With all those problems, the team still managed to qualify for the national championships in Oakland, Calif., causing a new set of problems — transportation and lodging for them and their boats.

They borrowed a boat from Radcliffe and, ironically, ended up beating Radcliffe in the finals. They paid their own way to California, a cost of $1,000 per woman. And they rented the boat trailer owned by the BU men's crew team for five cents a mile, a cost of some $300 for the 6,000-mile round trip.

"If we had been men," says Miss Hochberg, "the athletic department wouldn't have been able to do enough things for us."

Many athletic departments have recognized the existence of women, and, of course, athletics, but not the two together.

At Ohio State, women received $40,000 last year out of a whopping $6 million athletic budget. This year, the women's ante has been raised to $83,000.

At the University of Maryland, which has had a Title IX complaint filed against it by Maryland businessman Carl Croyder, women now receive $30,000 for sports out of a $2.2 million athletic budget.

And at Texas A&M, women have 10 sports and a total budget of $200.

In the Southern Conference, where the constitution formerly said its goals were to provide athletic competition for "male" students, the word "male" was dropped last December.

Most schools have operated women's athletics "on a different philosophy than men's programs," says John E. Shay, vice president of student affairs at the University of Rhode Island.

"Men's sports have full-time coaches, in most major sports, or are freed from regular teaching duties to undertake coaching," Shay says. "Women have coached the women's sports as an overload, in addition to their other duties on campus."

Title IX is designed eventually to create one identical sports philosophy for both sexes, but it won't erase the bad memories.

At Michigan State, "we had to fit our practices around the men's team," says Laura Siebald, a member of the women's swim team. But, as it turns out, that was the least of their problems.

Miss Siebald said the women divers were practicing at odd hours in the men's pool, which was 14 feet deep. But for one home women's meet, the men needed their pool for practice so the meet was held in another pool, only nine feet deep.

Some of the divers came away from that meet with chipped teeth, bruised heads and scratches from colliding with the bottom of the pool, Miss Siebald said.

Things are looking up at Forreton

By MIKE CUNIFF
Telegraph Sports Editor

FORRESTON—The cliché "things are looking up" personifies both the Forreton basketball program and what head varsity coach Dan Harmon has to do when he watches his squad go through their practices.

The second-year coach has four seniors and the same number of junior candidates that are 6'0" or taller out of the 15-man squad. And in a year in which height seems to be scarce in the Mid-Northern Conference, the quantity of tall players has to be a plus to the Cardinals' chances.

Gone from last year's 9-4 Mid-Northern (second place) and 16-6 overall team are all-conference selection Rusty Harker, Steve Collman, Al Gapsinski and Scott Schulz. Harker had a 14.0 points per game average and pulled down 177 rebounds, while Schulz had 153 markers. Collman chipped in with 114 points and 113 rebounds, while Gapsinski ended with 87 points in addition to 83 assists.

Back from the squad, however, are a set of guards and forwards who figure on seeing a lot of action this time around. Jim Gapsinski (5'11") dumped in 209 points for a 10.0 average in 1973-74 at one guard slot, while 5'10" Greg Muller tallied 185 points (8.4 a game) and dished out 45 assists on the other side.

The forwards returning are 6'3" Justin Krusey (109 points and 70 rebounds) and 6'3½" Lyle Zumdhall (124 and 128). All four are letter winners. Norm Kilker (5'11") saw limited action and is counted on to be a swingman between forward and guard.

Harmon is also counting on a pair of juniors, with 6'6½" Jack Dollmeyer at center and 6'4½" Doug Osterloo at either center or forward. Dollmeyer and Osterloo were main factors in the 14-8 record achieved by the sophomore squad last season, including a 12-3 slate after the Christmas break.

Adding depth at the guard positions are juniors Steve Stocker (5'9"), Ken Kutzke (5'8") and Steve Lehne (5'8"). Ken Vin-nedge (6'0" senior) and 5'11" junior Rich Runte are reserve forwards. Senior Scott Palmer (6'0") and junior Mark Capps (6'0") will double at both guard and forward. Brian Stukenberg (6'3½" senior) backs up the center slot.

"We've been at it (practice) for a week now," Harmon noted, "and I'm real satisfied with our progress. I just wish we didn't play as soon as we do."

The Cardinals travel to Shannon Tuesday night to begin their season.

"One of our strengths has to be our height," Harmon added. "We've got more than we've ever had before and this will allow us to change our usual philosophy. We should be able to go to the boards. We've always been a man-to-man small press team but the height will enable us to open up more on offense."

"We might play a little more zone to take advantage of our height and we'll try to fast-break more. We are eight or nine guys deep and have depth at every position. And we are going to be quick. Even our big boys can move pretty well."

Harmon's conference prediction began with, "I would definitely call ourselves contenders. Last year, nobody else seemed to take us seriously. But we expect to be in there for the title. Mt. Morris won't be out of it until somebody beats them. Polo is going to be tough and some other teams could surprise."

The Cardinals will once again be hosting their own Pre-Christmas Tournament. The tourney has been expanded to nine teams this season, with Leaf River, Savanna, Lanark and Scales Mound taking the places of Hanover, Elizabeth and Oregon which dropped out. Rounding out the field are Warren, Freeport Aquin, Stockton and Mt. Morris.

Forreton has 19 regular season games lined up, with 10 at home and nine on the road. Non-conference contests versus Shannon, Stockton and Thomson precede the Cardinals' entrance into Mid-Northern action against Winnebago on Dec. 6.

Oilers meet Bengals again

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

About three weeks ago, the Houston Oilers, sagging under the weight of a five-game losing streak, left home and staggered into Cincinnati. And just about everyone figured the string would run to six.

A few hours later it was the Bengals who were staggering. The Oilers pranced out of Riverfront Stadium with a 34-21 victory.

An upset, everyone said. A fluke.

So the Oilers followed that up by knocking off the New York Jets 27-22 and the Buffalo Bills 21-9. Now the streak is a positive one — three victories in a row, for the first time since 1971. It was the best road trip in the team's history. Those three victories were more than Houston had won the entire past two seasons combined.

And on Sunday, they face the Bengals again, this time in the suddenly friendly Astrodome. The team is predicting the largest crowd of the season, perhaps a sellout.

Sunday's other National Football League games, it's Pittsburgh at Cleveland, Los Angeles at New Orleans, San Diego at Oakland, Buffalo at Miami, St. Louis at Philadelphia, Dallas at Washington, Green Bay at Minnesota, the New York Giants at Detroit, the Jets at New England, San Francisco at Chicago and Baltimore at Atlanta. On Monday night, Denver hosts Kansas City.

Sid Gillman, the coach of the rejuvenated Oilers, doesn't buy that "upset" business anymore. "We feel we can play with anybody," he said.

The Bengals have a pretty good quarterback in Ken Anderson, the NFL's No. 1 passer. He picked Pittsburgh to pieces in last week's 17-10 victory that trimmed the Steelers' lead in the American Conference Central Division to one-half game over the Bengals.

What Anderson has done for Cincinnati, Don Pastorini has done for the Oilers. Given time to pass by his improved offensive line, Pastorini has thrown five touchdown strikes in the last four games and has moved up to fourth among American Conference passers.

Pittsburgh Coach Chuck Noll

isn't saying who his starting quarterback will be against the Browns. Terry Bradshaw, who lost his job to Joe Gilliam in the exhibition season, has been back as the starter the past few games. And Terry Hanratty is still lurking on the sidelines.

The Steelers haven't won in Cleveland since 1964.

The Rams need only a tie against New Orleans — whom they shut out 24-0 in the second game of the season — to clinch the National Conference West title.

The Raiders can also lock up the AFC West title if they beat San Diego and Denver loses to Kansas City Monday night. Oakland has an eight-game winning streak going.

The Dolphins are still hurting at running back with Larry Csonka and Mercury Morris only questionable for their AFC East showdown with the Bills. Buffalo's O.J. Simpson, who left last week's game with a sprained ankle, is expected to start.

The Eagles, hosting St. Louis, were given a strong shot at challenging for the NFC East title but are struggling now, having lost four in a row.

The Redskins and Cowboys, who have spent the last three seasons slugging it out for first place in the division, are both trying to catch St. Louis this time around. Washington, one game off the pace and one up on Dallas, will again leave untipped game time the decision of whether Sonny Jurgensen or Billy Kilmer starts at quarterback.

Like the Raiders, Minnesota can win its division — the NFC Central — with some help. The Vikings have to stop down John Hadl and beat Green Bay and need a loss by Detroit, which has beaten the Giants in the teams' last four meetings.

The Patriots, one game back of Miami and Buffalo after leading the division for most of the year, are hoping to duplicate their Oct. 13 24-0 shutout over the Jets, who came alive against the Giant behind Joe Namath's brilliant passing last week.

Rookie Tom Owen, who lost his starting job to Norm Snead, then replaced the injured veteran quarterback last week, is back in the starting lineup against the Bears. The Falcons and Colts are on three-game losing slides. Baltimore has never lost to Atlanta but is encountering quarterbacking problems with both Marty Domres, who played last week, and Bert Jones hurt.

Rockford Speedway rules

ROCKFORD—Rockford Speedway officials announced today Late-Model rules for the upcoming 1975 season will remain basically unchanged from their "new" '74 rules.

In the spring of 1974 Rockford started the short-track stock car racing world by coming out with specifications which made it possible for oval-track competitors to race much less expensive cars and remain competitive.

Ten to twelve thousand dollars and up was the going price for a competitive machine under the old rules. Now a Late-Model stocker can be fielded for $3500 or less.

Copies of the new rules for '75 will be available in December and may be obtained by writing Rockford Speedway, P.O. Box 1000, Rockford, Ill. 61105.

Kings nip the Celtics, Heinsohn cries foul at end

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Boston Coach Tommy Heinsohn cried foul because official Mark Schlafman wouldn't.

With his Celtics trailing 110-109 and six seconds showing on the clock Friday night, Heinsohn watched Boston guard Jo Jo White drive three-quarters the length of the court against Scott Wedman of the Kansas City-Omaha Kings.

White went up for what would be a game-winning layup, but the ball missed everything, hitting neither basket nor backboard. Heinsohn waited for a foul to be called on the play.

No call. KC-Omaha wins.

And that's when Heinsohn cried foul.

"When you drive to the hoop like that for the last shot and there's no foul, I'm a monkey's uncle," Heinsohn said, visibly angry.

Elsewhere in the National Basketball Association Friday night, the Washington Bullets beat the New Orleans Jazz 104-95, the Detroit Pistons stopped the Seattle SuperSonics 117-103, the Chicago Bulls defeated the Phoenix Suns 102-95 and the Los Angeles Lakers topped the Philadelphia 76ers 105-99.

In the American Basketball Association, the Utah Stars whipped the New York Nets 109-98 and the Denver Rockets beat the Indiana Pacers 120-114.

"Wedman not only had Jo Jo on the wrist, he had him on the whole thing, the whole body. It was Schlafman's call and he didn't want to call it," Heinsohn fumed.

The Kings took an early 15-point lead in the game, then watched the Celtics come back for a 109-106 lead with 2:39 to play. But that was all Boston could manage, and it was not enough as Jimmy Walker hit a basket with 2:24 to play and Larry McNeill sank two free throws at 1:37 to put the Kings on top.

Nate Archibald scored 29 points and backcourtmate Walker hit for 23. Boston's John Havlicek led all scorers with 30.

Elvin Hayes erupted for 34 points to pace Washington past the expansion Jazz, but the big excitement there came with three minutes left in the third quarter, when New Orleans' guard Pete Maravich was ejected from the game for protesting an official's call too vehemently.

Bob Raket, the official, nailed Maravich for one technical foul for the protest and another when the confrontation became a nose-to-nose shouting match.

The Pistons held Seattle to 33 points in the first half, rolled up a 99-63 lead after three periods and coasted to victory. John Mengelt had 20 points and five other Detroit players scored in double figures.

Chet Walker scored 27 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to power the Bulls past Phoenix.

Lucius Allen, obtained from Milwaukee last week, scored 24 points for Los Angeles and triggered the Lakers' fast break. He also came up with eight steals.

Ron Boone's 32 points helped Utah beat the Nets, who were playing their third road game in three nights.

Denver built a 24-point lead, then held off a Pacer rally in the third period which was sparked by Billy Keller's four three-point baskets.

Keller scored 16 points in the third quarter and finished the night with 20. Kevin Joyce of the Pacers was the game's high scorer with 24 points, while Denver's Mike Green and Mack Calvin had 23 apiece and Bobby Jones added 21.

Bulls beat Suns

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Good team play was credited by Chicago Coach Dick Motta for the Bulls' 102-95 victory over the Phoenix Suns in National Basketball Association play.

"We got the tempo going after the first quarter," said Motta after Friday night's contest.

"We got our guards to the base line and if you get there, you're going to have many fast breaks. They hit really good," said Motta.

"Tom (Boerwinkle) got us back into the game." He referred to six points and good board work by Boerwinkle in the second quarter. "We were 13 down and didn't lose our poise. We never lose our poise."

"They got the second shots," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "We didn't rebound with them. For most of the third quarter we gave up that second shot and you have trouble winning when you do that."

Chet Walker paced the Bulls with 27 points and 11 rebounds as Chicago came from behind in the second quarter.

Phoenix jumped to a 27-0 first-quarter lead, but the Bulls took over the lead with 1:45 remaining in the second period.

Charlie Scott, who scored 10 points in the first quarter, finished the night with 26 points. Keith Erickson had 23 and Dick Van Arsdale had 21 points.

John Block dropped in 19 points for the Bulls with Norm Van Lier adding 18 and Matt Goukas 17.

During the third quarter the Bulls cashed 13 of 14 free throws while Phoenix managed only five of six.

Friday's Games
Edmonton 5, Toronto 4
Winnipeg 5, Indianapolis 0
Cleveland 5, San Diego 3

By The Associated Press
Philadelphia did it early in the third period while Los Angeles came through in the final two minutes of its game. But both the Flyers and the Kings were only able to survive their National Hockey League battles with ties.

Philadelphia battled evenly with the Atlanta Flames 2-2 while Los Angeles and the Vancouver Canucks also tied 2-2.

In other NHL games Friday, Kansas City defeated the New York Islanders 4-2 and Toronto topped California 5-3.

In the World Hockey Association, Edmonton edged Toronto 5-4, Winnipeg crushed Indianapolis 5-0 and Cleveland beat San Diego 5-3.

"We played well enough to win," Philadelphia Flyers' Coach Fred Shero said. Atlanta felt the same way.

Orest Kindrachuk scored early in the final period to pull the Flyers into their 2-2 deadlock and extend Philadelphia's unbeaten string to 10 consecutive games. The Flames had jumped out to a 2-0 advantage on goals by Buster Harvey and Tim Ecclestone. Rick MacLeish scored the Flyers' first tally.

The Philadelphia-Atlanta battle pitted the top two teams in the NHL's Division 1.

Los Angeles, the Division 3 leader, needed a goal from Frank St. Marseille with less than two minutes remaining in the contest to knot the score with Vancouver, No. 1 in Division 2.

Vancouver could manage just one shot on goal in the second period, but held a 2-1 lead after Bobby Lalonde scored just eight seconds into the final period. That left it for St. Marseille's heroics as the period was running out.

Two goals in the final five minutes by Simon Nolet lifted the Kansas City Scouts to their victory over the Islanders. Nolet, who also had an assist on the Scouts' second period goal, put Kansas City ahead when he beat goalie Glen Resch with 4:44 left in the game. His second goal came into an open net with six seconds to play.

Three goals by Toronto's Bill Flett, one in each period, powered the Maple Leafs to victory over the California Golden Seals. The win also boosted third-place Toronto three points ahead of California in the NHL's Division 4.

California took a 3-1 lead in the opening period while Toronto had a man in the penalty box. But Flett's second-period goal and Ron Ellis's eighth goal of the year knotted the count. Flett's game-winner came four minutes into the third period and Darryl Sittler added an insurance tally.

Ernie Wakely, making only his second start of the season at goalie for Winnipeg, stopped all 39 Indianapolis shots, and power play goals by Larry Hornung and Anders Hedbert in the opening period started the Jets on their way to victory.

Winnipeg broke the game open with goals within a three-minute span of the third period by Duke Asmundson, Ulf Nilsson and Veli Ketola.

Ray McKay, Don Herriman and Ron Climie all scored within a span of 2:11 in the second period to spark Edmonton's victory. It was the fifth straight win for the Oilers, who outshot the Toronto Toros 44-22 in the game.

Richard Faria had two goals for the Toros.

Ron Ward pulled Cleveland into a 3-3 tie with his first goal of the night, then scored the winning goal for the Crusaders minutes later. Tom Edur tallied Cleveland's insurance point in the third period.

The National Sporting Goods Association made a survey of 32,000 American families to learn about current sports and recreation activities. The sport that recorded the largest percentage gain in equipment sales was not tennis, as many had guessed. Archery equipment ranked as the fastest-growing product line with a 35-per cent sales increase. Tennis was next with 30 per cent.

INVEST IN LAND

Invest in productive farm land. A basic commodity — limited in supply. An excellent hedge against inflation.

You or your group can purchase a productive 195 acre farm, 1½ miles southwest of Mt. Morris with an initial investment of only $50,000.

Yearly payments for a period of five years can be offset by entering into a lease-back agreement with the seller. Interest payments and depreciation will save you tax dollars and of course, you will be entitled to the likely appreciation in the value of the land.

Ford trying to urge Israel to negotiate

By BARRY SCHWEID
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is trying to prod Israel into negotiations with Egypt and Jordan while conveying the impression that a stalemate could force the Jewish state to deal with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"We are not parties to any negotiations," the President said at a news conference in Phoenix, Ariz., Thursday night. "I think we should leave the decisions on who will negotiate to the parties involved."

He duly noted that Israel has vowed never to deal with the PLO, the umbrella group for guerrillas and terrorists which 20 Arab state chose over Jordan as the representative for 600,000 west bank Palestinians.

But he did not foreclose the possibility that Washington might promote such negotiations if Israel does not come to terms with Egypt and Jordan.

"Until we have failed, and I don't think we will in trying to get the parties to work together, er, I don't think it is appropriate to discuss what we'll do if we don't achieve success," Ford said.

Ford clearly implied it is up to Israel to get talks started with its more moderate neighbors.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's year-long strategy is aimed at step-by-step settlements by Israel with Egypt and Jordan, while shelving the PLO problem. But the Arab summit conference pushed the Palestinian issue to the front.

Ford made it clear that the administration still considers its strategy viable. But the burden of making it work is more than ever on Israel.

Ford first raised the prospect of PLO negotiations last week when he said there must be movement toward settlement "between Israel and Jordan or the PLO."

While his press secretary later said the President stood behind that statement, Kissinger assured Israeli officials in Jerusalem that "there is no change in American policy on any of the issues."

U.S. officials said Israelis were less concerned as a result of Kissinger's visit. But observers detected some skepticism that the United States would continue to oppose the PLO as a negotiating party if other negotiations stall.

Ford's comments probably will reinforce this concern. They also underscore Kissinger's conviction that Jordan can play a significant role in achieving a peaceful settlement in the Middle East, despite the endorsement of the PLO by the Arab leaders.

Anti-semitic remark may yet haunt General Brown

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says Gen. George S. Brown will remain as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff despite Brown's "one mistake" in remarks about Jewish influence.

But some administration officials say they believe Brown still could be in jeopardy if congressional attacks on the general grow significantly and persist when the House and Senate return next week.

Opinion among White House staff members is said to be mixed on whether Brown should go. But Brown has the support of Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger, although Schlesinger deplores what Brown said in a meeting at Duke University last month.

Asked about Brown's status at a news conference in Phoenix, Ariz., Thursday night, Ford noted that "I have publicly disavowed the comments made by Gen. Brown."

The President also noted that he had called Brown to his White House office early Thursday and "indicated to him very directly my strong feelings" on the matter, and that Brown had publicly apologized for his remarks.

But, said Ford, "I have no intention of asking Gen. Brown to resign. He has been an excellent chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

"He is going to continue as chairman," Ford said. "He is a fine officer and he's done a good job, and I don't think he should be fired for that one mistake."
